Monthly Commentary

The Fasanara GDADF delivereda gross return of 0.56% in June 2026, higher than May and in line with the Fund'starget, asanticipated following last month's temporary cash drag. Deployment recovered well above 90%, with average yields remaining at ~9% in EUR terms and average portfolio duration at 103 days, firmly within targets and consistent with the Fund's short-duration mandate.

The macro backdrop remained complex in June. Global real GDP growth is now forecast at 2.2% for 2026, with the eurozone facing near-stagnant growth of 0.2%, while global consumer price inflation is expected to hold at 4.1% (S&P Global Economic Outlook, June 2026). Monetary policy divergence has become more pronounced, with the ECB raising rates by 25 basis points in June while the Fed remains on hold and emerging market central banks increasingly split between hiking and easing. In this environment, short-duration, non-bank credit strategies continue to offer a compelling alternative to rate-sensitive public market exposures.

The Fund's portfolio continues to grow and remains well balanced, with exposures diversified across jurisdictions, asset classes, and originator partners. This diversification, combined with the self-liquidating nature of the underlying assets and an average duration of 90-120 days, ensures resilience across varying rate and macro environments. Fundamentals remain solid and the pipeline active heading into the second half of 2026.

Why Invest?

Uncorrelated Asset Class: Trade finance and invoice discounting are real economy trades that traditionally belonged to banks but have recently opened up to alternative and Fintech direct lenders such as Fasanara.

Compelling Risk-adjusted Yield: higher yield typical of SME financing with much lower risks thanks to high grade collateral and ultra-short duration.

Diversification: granular portfolio with more than 600,000 across several debtors and across several sectors and countries.

Short Duration & Yield: average duration 45-90 days. long-only fund, generating a target annual yield of 9-12% in USD.

Resilience: systematic over-collateralisation by advancing on average only 85% of the collateral face value as well as by opportunistically re-insuring against credit default risk.
