The U.S. residential investment market is navigating a more selective environment as it enters autumn 2026. Rising active inventory and slowing transaction velocity are shifting negotiating power toward buyers in several markets, a dynamic that rewards operators who source deals at real discounts and execute renovations on tight timelines. In September 2026, end-buyers require wider safety margins, and the simple formula of offering 70% of ARV minus repairs is no longer sufficient in many markets. The investors who continue to perform are those with the local knowledge and capital access to move quickly on well-underwritten deals.
